

Vision and Mission Statements

As world citizens, our purpose is to offer support in good faith to the people and groups who are providing direct help to those in need as the result of the war disaster in the Ukraine.

As individuals in the war region step forward to assist others as volunteers, very often using their own resources, we are committed to provide any support we can in any way that we can.

These humanitarian workers are often not associated with a formal organisation, but are joining forces with local communities and networks to meet the needs they see around them. With the lack of supplies and funding on-site, their efforts are limited as they search for more helping hands, materials, expert advice or sometimes simple encouragement to continue.

How can we as citizens, assist these volunteers? What efforts currently underway can we support? What specifically are the needs of those helping on the 'front lines' ?

What kind of new world we can create, if we gather beyond countries, languages, cultures, customs and religious beliefs and expand our helping network into society at large?

We are committed to keep asking "What is it that we can do to help?", rather than giving up or becoming defeated by the complex nature of helping in a war region.

We aim for solidarity with others who have the same goals of bringing peace and balance back to our world, which has been damaged so severely by force and violence.

As a group, we are uniquely organised because each opinion will be respected in the open communication platform. We will bring our ideas and abilities together regarding what we can do to provide assistance to volunteers already in action.

We are not biased toward a specific nation, thought, or belief.

We will respond with flexibility and openness, welcome trial and error, and always strive to operate with compassion, understanding and positive thinking.

We will work with dignity in each setting as we solve problems through dialogue rather than through force or aggression.

We firmly believe that one small action creates great energy and then hope through solidarity.

And through all of this, we promise to "Change everything with love" .
